

CHARGE IRREGULARITIES
IN DALY CITY ELECTION

Daly City's municipal election of April 9 again faced the fire of criticism in Superior Judge Maxwell McNutt's court before a capacity crowd in Redwood City on Tuesday of this week.

Three Daly City residents who voted at the April 9 election testified, upon questioning by defense counsel, that their signatures were on the roster of voters as having voted. They denied, however, that they signed their names to the affidavits of registration, which constitute part of the evidence before the court.

The persons testifying to this effect were Mrs. Emilie M. Lockett, Kenneth Williams and William Williams. When shown the affidavits, they all denied that the signatures were in their handwriting.

Also testifying was Harvey Purser, whose wife, Evelyn, is a daughter of Mayor Hugh Smith of Daly City, one of the victors in the contested election.

Although admitting that he and his wife had resided in San Jose for the past year, Purser identified the signature on the election register of an "Evelyn Smith" as that of his wife.

Twelve Daly City voters identified their signatures on the election rolls of polling places for precincts in which they asserted they did not have their residence.

Leo Friedman, attorney for plaintiffs, has subpoenaed 172 voters to testify during the hearing.

Attorneys Lee and Hall Ross, J. E. McCurdy and J. W. Coleberd are handling the case for the defendants.

At the conclusion of Tuesday's session the case was continued until next Tuesday, when more witnesses will be examined.

VETERANS HOLD
PICNIC AT BEACH

Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, held their second annual picnic on Sunday, June 10, at Valle Mar Park, Salada Beach. We had the largest crowd in our history at this party, there being 223 members and friends present. The following Posts were well represented: McQuade Post 1205, San Francisco, and the following Posts from San Francisco, Richmond district 2324, Matalon Post 2068, San Mateo, San Bruno Tanforan Post 2517, Lt. Brunton Post 2421, Mountain View, Thos. E. Hickey Post 266601, South San Francisco, Corp. J. L. Wilson Post 2310, Redwood City, Old Glory Post 2044, had approximately 100 members and friends present. The Daly City American Legion attended with 30 members and friends.

The big base ball game, bringing together the foes of Daly City, the Veterans of Foreign Wars and American Legion, after five terrific innings ended in a 15 to 15 tie. It is being worked out now to see if a series of return games cannot be arranged to see who is the champion. I will string along with the V. F. W.

The races brought out the best in the neighborhood, and we really did not think we had so many real horse shoe players in the city. A tournament will be the only outcome to determine the best. Dancing was enjoyed by everyone after the lunch and ball game to a good orchestra.

The membership contest held during the past few months between the members of the Degree team and the balance of the Post was won by the Post team. The degree team will entertain the winners at a dinner sometime in the near future. Place and time to be announced later.

The Parmisano Brothers, prominent members of Old Glory Post will hold their formal opening of their new place of business on Saturday, June 16th. Plans are being laid to journey there in a body and give them a real send off and wish them much happiness and prosperity in their new home.

The Post dance will be held on June 16th in the Eagles Hall. These dances are getting bigger all the time. A good orchestra is being engaged, a good crowd will be on hand, and altogether, an evening long to be remembered will be had by all those who attend. Why not put this night aside for V. F. W. and join the crowd?

P. T. A. OFFICERS
LUNCHEON GUESTS

Mrs. John J. Garland, president of the seventeenth district, P. T. A., and the outgoing presidents of the local units were complimented by Mrs. Lillian Landini of Winchester street, who gave an Italian luncheon in their honor on Wednesday afternoon of last week. The local presidents also made the affair a handkerchief shower in honor of Mrs. Garland.

During the afternoon Miss Victoria Russell, art chairman of the seventeenth district, gave a delightful talk on the wild flowers around Lake Merced and also reviewed the book, "Skiyoo Magee." Mrs. Garland recited several beautiful poems about gardens and flowers.

The living and dining rooms were decorated with yellow roses and large fires were blazing in the fireplaces, which made the setting for the luncheon a cherry one.

Among those present were past presidents representing the units of Redwood City, San Carlos, Salada Beach, Bayshore, South San Francisco, Belmont, Woodside, San Mateo, Burlingame and Daly City.

Our next regular meeting will be held next Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. Be sure to attend.

ROYCE SPORTS
LOSE CLOSE GAME

By "Moe" Plansky

The Royce Sports journeyed to Ukiah, Sunday, and were defeated by the Ukiah Hospital team by the slim margin of 6 runs to 5, in one of the fastest games played on the Ukiah field this season.

The contest was a hurling duel between Sammy Hawley of the Royce team and Bishop of the Hospital nine. They both pitched superb ball and were afforded excellent support by their team mates. Hawley also garnered two bingles for himself, while Bishop hit a long triple.

"Babe" Pierotti batted 1000 for the day with two lousy clouts. One of his hits went for a triple and the other for a double.

Maloney played a bang up game in left field, while Charlie Fernando, playing his first game at third base, handled five difficult chances without an error.

Johnston, right fielder for the Ukiah team, hit a home run with a man on the paths in the eighth inning. Grilli, second baseman and manager of the club, collected two hits in four times at bat. Cameron, former catcher for the Royce Sports, was behind the bat for the Ukiah team and gave a good exhibition of receiving.

A very peculiar play occurred in this contest in the sixth inning. The Ukiah team had a man on second base and one man out. The batter hit a high infield fly directly over second base. Tom Foley, playing the key-stone sack, started after the ball, but did not catch it and the ball hit him on the lip as he turned the wrong way. Pierotti, playing center field, came charging in to back up the play and caught the ball as it bounded off Foley's lip before it could reach the ground. The runner on second base went to third, thinking the ball was dropped. Pierotti immediately threw the ball to second base and completed a double play.

After being hit with the ball, and with his lip and nose bleeding, Foley refused to leave the game and played sensational ball throughout the remainder of the contest. This young fellow showed real intestinal fortitude and deserves a great deal of praise.

The Ukiah manager, Grilli, was so pleased with the contest that he invited the Royce team for a return game some time in July.

The color scheme was carried out in pink and white and at the bride to be's place was a corsage of white lilies. Miss Gehrig received every necessary accessory for a bathroom.

Those attending were Mesdames Olga Bruch, Jeannette Carroll, Lorraine Wall, Helen Peterson, Emma Hershey, Mary Gehrig, Alma Luce, Catherine Luce, Emma Luce; Misses Margaret Gehrig, Barbara and Georgina Luce.

SKANDALON

Malicious utterance of false reports is increasing at an alarming rate in our community. Day by day more defamations and untruthful accusations are spread around with poisonous intent. Injury of good names is the only thing aimed at.

The crime of the tongue is stigmatized, and rightly, by fair minded citizens of all ranks, as the lowest in human conduct.

Skandalon, the old word for slander, had this significance:

OFFENSE.

That is exactly what slander is—an offense against decency, good manners; it is a stench in the nostrils of our civilization.

All skulking jackals do not move about on four legs. Some on two legs slink around, seeking to find an ear for the outpouring of their dastardly villifications. Traducing is a second nature with them.

What is the motive of the slanders?

That is a fair question, and we'll give a fair answer.

REVENGE, and revenge only, is sought in the calumniations furtively passed from slanderer to slanderer.

COUNTRY GETTING BACK TO NORMAL

By J. W. MARCHBANK
(Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work)

It is always heartening to discover successful men of the thinking type agree with me on vital problems of the times. Only the other day I found an expression of the opinions of Bernard E. ("Ben") Smith, one of the heaviest investors in mines in both the United States and Canada, that covers the whole economic situation in an admirable manner. I could not "fault" it in the least.

The best of it is, Mr. Smith is optimistic, believing, as I do, that President Roosevelt is on the right road and is deserving of the wholehearted support of the country. Right to the point is a prediction, which I have made in this column, that the federal government will further devalue the dollar by raising the price of gold from the present $35 to $41.34 an ounce.

Mr. Smith is quoted in public prints as saying:

"The purpose of devaluation is, of course, the wiping out of part of the tremendous burden of debt from which the ordinary man can never escape. Any rich man who does not understand that he will be compelled to give up one-half of his wealth is fooling himself."

Among the United States holdings of the well known investor are those in the Homestake in South Dakota, the Standard in Montana and the Argonaut in this state. In Canada his interests are distributed over a wide field, including British Columbia and Ontario properties.

Another note in the right direction is sounded by Dr. W. A. Carrothers, chairman of the Economic Council of British Columbia. It is along the line I have dilated upon at considerable length in this column, namely, training of our youth for mining and agricultural pursuits. Just because there has been a paucity of opportunity for the new generation over a period of years does not mean that lamentable condition should not be corrected. Our young people should be trained for the rich opportunities before them in Alaska and other parts of the country.

In commenting on the point made by Dr. Carrothers that there may be a shortage of skilled labor in the next few years, the editor of the Vancouver Sun says:

"Since late in 1914, for nearly twenty years, there has been complete disruption of the simple processes by which the ranks of skilled labor were replenished as they thinned out. Youth, instead of being carefully coached for the professions and skilled trades, has to some extent been left to wander vagrant-footed into 'laboring' jobs or to no jobs at all, because trades and professions that normally required the infusion of new, life-giving blood, have been at a standstill, or moving only at a funeral gait, through bankers' attempts to maintain old methods of credit. Trade and industry were forced into insolvency and ca-canny production through too high interest rates—rates based on artificial prosperity, rates of 7 or 8 per cent or more based on a conception of credit as a tool of personal appropriation instead of a tool of trade expansion and national industrial development."

Promising gold values continue to be encountered in the Bridge River gold fields, according to latest reports from the North. On the deepest level of the Pioneer a fine face of ore running over $200 in gold per ton has been found. At the Bralorne what is believed to be the intersection of two good veins has been located and there is every indication the values will run high. A massive ore body, carrying valuable mineralization, has been found at the Hillside.

British Columbia mining has benefited largely by an influx of capital from the United States and the province to the north of us leads the Dominion of Canada in the per capita of her metal production, according to official figures recently released.

As to conditions in British Columbia, W. A. McAdam, acting agent-general for the province, recently said:

"Despite its obligations, British Columbia remains one of the richest provinces in Canada, a fact which is frequently lost sight of when the temporary embarrassments due to world depression are now and again unduly stressed. The value of gold production in British Columbia has more than doubled in two years, and a still larger output is assured in the future."

MINING NOTES

Gossip Pertinent to the Industry
Gathered from Various Sources

The largest mining deal in the vicinity of Juneau in the past two decades is now under negotiation, involving the entire holdings of the old Gastineau Gold Mining Company, now owned by the Alaska Mining and Power Company.

The Alaska Juneau Gold Mining Company, whose workings about the old Perseverance mine, has made a definite offer for all of the former Gastineau properties, including power plants and sites, townships, mining claims and other properties.

The Alaska Juneau has offered to acquire these properties by exchanging two shares of its stock for one share of the Alaska Mining and Power Company. The offer involves 53,802 shares of Alaska Juneau stock, which are worth under current quotations about $1,000,000.

The properties involved embrace the Perseverance mine, Thane, with its docks, warehouses, housing accommodations, shops and other equipment, the power plants at Annex Creek and Salmon Creek and power transmission lines. All of this property, except the power plants, has been lying idle since the Alaska Gastineau discontinued operations some thirteen years ago.

Daniel C. Roper, secretary of commerce, and Joseph T. Robinson, United States senator from Arkansas, are expected to arrive in Seattle from the East and sail for Alaska on Saturday, June 30.

Judge James Wickersham, former Delegate to Congress from Alaska, who went to Fairbanks from his home in Juneau to make the principal address at the graduating exercises of the Alaska Agricultural College and School of Mines, and while in the interior metropolis broke sod for the new Eielson Memorial Hall, reported increased activities in gold and other mining, largely as a result of greater airplane operations. The interior is entering a new era and statehood is being looked forward to by the territory, Judge Wickersham said.

The editor of Gold says: "Man writes to this magazine asking where he may buy 'ready-made' gold mines, and declares that the sky is the limit. . . . we do not know who has a made-to-order mine to sell. . . . those who have them hold them. . . . and if one attempted to buy control through the stock exchange. . . . which is always possible. . . . he would have to pay a king's ransom—aye, the ransom of a thousand kings, at current quotations."

ATTEND VETERANS PICNIC

A group of friends motored to Alcatraz Park, Halfmoon Bay, last Sunday, where they attended the picnic given by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The main feature of the day was the baseball game played by the teams of Daly City Post No. 410 of the American Legion and Old Glory Post, Veterans of Foreign Wars. The teams battled to a tie score. Comrade Talmadge batted out a home run.

Among those who enjoyed the day's outing were Dr. and Mrs. F. Callsen and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Orr and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Andersen and daughters, Mr. and Mrs. Miller and family and Mr. and Mrs. H. Prizboski and family and Mr. and Mrs. O. Talmadge and family.

PLACER OUTPUT
SHOWS INCREASE

British Columbia gold yielded its producers $6,955,716 last year, and is estimated to produce no less than $11,500,000 this year, according to the annual report of George S. Pearson, minister of mines of the northern province.

Following are some of the outstanding facts gleaned from the report:

Gross value of British Columbia's mineral production for 1933 was $30,674,486; an increase of $2,432,868, or 8.61 per cent over 1932.

Gold production for 1933, valued at the standard price of $20.67 per fine ounce, was $5,027,530; an increase of 22.6 per cent over 1932 and 51.9 per cent over 1931.

Premium on gold production, making the return in Canadian funds an average of $28.60 an ounce, causes this yield to produce $6,955,716 in money to operators; this is 107.5 per cent more than the money yield of the 1931 gold production.

Yield of 1934 gold production in terms of Canadian dollars expected to reach $11,500,000.

Placer gold production was $406,776, an increase of $59,976, or 17.3 per cent over 1932.

Dividends of mining companies in 1933 averaged $3,034,484, as compared with $3,040,363 in 1932.

No fewer than 145 new companies were formed in 1933 for the development of gold properties.

Employment in mining increased 8 per cent in 1933, and the industry was responsible for substantial increases in employment in allied and subsidiary industries.

In quantity, but its value of $2,650,270 was an increase of 17.3 per cent, due to improvement in the world metal prices.

Lead and zinc show small increases in quantity and larger increases in value, due to price improvements.

Milling an average of 100.67 tons of ore daily Reno mine recovered $53,503 in gold during the 29.84 working days of May, it is learned from W. A. Sutton, secretary of Reno Gold Mines Limited.

This represents a new high in Reno operations. During April the mill handled an average of 81 tons daily and in March 87.74 tons.

Gold recovery per ton milled in May was $17.80. Cost figures are not yet available, but since the first of the year Reno costs have been averaging $3.73 for mining and $2.36 for milling, or a combined mining and milling cost of $6.09 per ton.

MOTORCYCLIST INJURED

Dominic Gallardo, 15 Shakespeare street, was struck by a motorcycle driven by J. B. Cochran, 3224 San Jose avenue, about 2:30 o'clock on Thursday afternoon of last week at Crocker avenue and Brunswick street.

Cochran drove his motorcycle from in front of the Rolf grocery store as the injured man was crossing the street, the latter apparently becoming confused. Cochran says he tried to avoid striking the man, but the collision was not preventable.

Gallardo, who was employed on the weed gang here, sustained a broken leg as the result of the impact. He was removed to the Villa Sanitarium for treatment by members of Company 1, first aid crew, and members of the Daly City Municipal Water Department crew.

COLUMN OF
N. R. A. FACTS

Information regarding the N.R.A. will be furnished by W. H. Clay every week.

No employer in Daly City, who is complying with his Code need experience any further delay in getting his Blue Eagle. In order to speed action, Administrator Hugh S. Johnson has just instructed Code Authorities to distribute Blue Eagles immediately to members of their respective industries.

Employers may therefore expect to receive the NRA symbol from their Code Authorities in a very short time. Should any business man feel that delivery is unreasonably delayed, he need only apply to his local Code Authority representative to get his Blue Eagle immediately. If he is in doubt on any point, he may secure information through the representative, or through the Chairman of the local N.R.A. Committee, of Daly City.

Code Authorities are applying to the Insignia Section of N.R.A. for a supply sufficient to allot one to each member of its respective Trade or Industry. Administrator Johnson's instructions are that these be distributed at once to all employers operating under approved Codes (who have not been reported as violators to either the Compliance Division in Washington, D. C., or the Federal District Attorneys in the several states); and to retail and local service trades in towns of less than 2,500.

The service trades whose fair trade practice agreements have just been suspended by the Administrator, in accordance with President Roosevelt's Executive Order of May 26th, are still bound by Code regulations on child labor, hours, wages and collective bargaining. They are therefore entitled to Blue Eagles, and Code Authorities will distribute these, too.

These trades comprise motor vehicle storage and parking, bowling and billiards, barber shops, cleaning and dyeing, shoe rebuilding, advertising display installation, and advertising distributing.

Code Authorities are also authorized to contract for Blue Eagle reprints or reproductions, but only with lithographers or manufacturers who are themselves eligible for Blue Eagles. Employers who desire reprints should apply to their local Code Authority representatives, who will inform them on contract terms and prices, in lots of 10, 20, 50, 100 or more. Lithographers or manufacturers may receive orders only from code authorities, but they are to bill buyers directly.

Reproductions in the form of stationery, stickers, labels, halftones, electrotypes, etc., may be purchased in the market from any manufacturer authorized to reproduce the symbol.

The question of registration is left entirely to Code Authorities. They may register each Blue Eagle and allot a serial number to each employer. Where this is done, serial numbers which have been allotted previously must be first recorded, and these must not be duplicated.

The Administrator's order provides that the Blue Eagle may be withdrawn by him for violation of Code provisions or for non-payment of assessment, after thirty days' notice to pay. He points out that no Code Authority may levy assessment, however, until its budget and assessment plan has been approved by him.

No employer can be held liable for assessment by more than one Code Authority. If he is subject to more than one Code, his assessment is to be the one fixed by the Authority of the Code under which he operates his principal line of business. In case of disagreement as to what constitutes his principal line of business, the question is to be referred to N.R.A. for adjustment, and the judgement of N.R.A. is to be final.

Where there is no local Code Authority, or agency appointed by it, distribution may be made through the N.R.A. State Director or his designee. Applications now in the possession of the Insignia Section or of State Directors are to be forwarded to code authorities for action.

The order also provides that the government frank cannot be extended to code authority issuing agencies for distribution purposes.

Rights and Privileges Defined

The chief objectives of N. R. A. are concisely defined by A. G. McKnight, director of the recently created litigation division.

"The constitution," he says, "does not secure to anyone liberty to conduct his business in such fashion as to inflict injury upon the public at large, or upon any substantial group of the people. . . . I think we shall hear more from politicians about the rights invaded by the act than from the courts."

He points out four rights that are conferred on industry by N. R. A.:

"The right to fair codes of fair competition when the anti-trust laws have failed to function.

"The right to plan business by joint action and through exchange of information which was formerly forbidden.

"The right to restrain unfair competition where the lack of restraint means business disaster.

"The right of labor to bargain on an even basis with employers and to be free from ruinous competition as to wages."

The director of litigation believes that the law of self preservation justifies every step thus far taken to save the nation from the doom that was so clearly impending prior to the adoption of the National Industrial Recovery Act. The N. R. A. denies no rights, in his opinion; it denies only various privileges which selfish interests had come to regard as rights. "There are four 'rights' N. R. A. denies," he says.

"The 'right' of industrial giants to wreck each other and cause national disaster.

"The 'right' of children to be permanently stunted by laborious work in the days of their childhood.

"The 'right' of the masters of in-

Business Improvement

An examination of business conditions for January, February, March and April of 1934, compared with the same months in 1933, indicates substantial improvement along the whole business front.

The percentage of increase in March, 1934, over the corresponding month in 1933 naturally indicated a greater percentage of increase due to the fact, of course, that March, 1933, registered perhaps the lowest depths of the depression.

With the addition, however, of figures covering the first four months of the current year, the upturn is heartening.

Here are the figures:

Manufacturing production, up 32 per cent; automobile production, up 102 per cent; iron and steel production, up 123 per cent; cement production, up 47 per cent; plate glass production, up 58 per cent; lumber production, up 43 per cent; mineral produced, up 30 per cent; freight car loadings, up 20 per cent; construction contracts awarded, up 130 per cent; residential contracts awarded, up 36 per cent; rural general store sales, up 41 per cent; department store sales, up 21 per cent; variety store sales, up 16 per cent; candy store sales, up 28 per cent; newspaper advertising, up 18 per cent; radio advertising, up 39 per cent; factory employment, up 31 per cent; factory hourly pay, up 23 per cent; factory payrolls, up 59 per cent; retail trade employment, up 14 per cent; cash income farm marketings, up 35 per cent.

RICHARDSON

TANFORAN IN LINE
FOR GRAND FEATURES

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Volumes have been written about the Epsom Derby, won last week in its latest renewal by Windsor Lad. Closer home, the colt Cavalcade had his name inscribed on the long roll of Kentucky Derby victors only a short time ago. Great races are accorded worldwide publicity and, as all will agree, it is publicity that has the highest kind of appeal, by reason of its intrinsic class.

It takes years to build up interest in a worthwhile turf event. California has the opportunity of taking a place along with other centers in putting on, season after season, a race that will attract fans from many sections. Its importance will increase with each renewal.

A large prize must be offered for the California feature, and to make it of special significance it should have at least a quasi-official origin. The conditions are met by having a statute providing a stipulated portion of the commission on pari-mutuel pools should be set aside for a fund for the big purse.

Under my plan of reducing the "take" of mutuel pools from 12 to 9 per cent the big purse fund is taken care of, as, in addition to the 6 per cent going to the racing association and 1½ per cent to the state, 1½ per cent is to be turned over to the proposed fund.

In order to encourage breeding of the blood horse in the state the entire proceeds from the 1½ per cent need not be devoted to the contest designated usually as the "big race," but some of the revenue could be used for a prize in a produce event for two year olds. The first of the futurities would be run at Tanforan in the fall of 1937. Nominations would close in the early part of next year, with brood mares named that are due to foal in the spring making the foals eligible.

Living costs under the New Deal have risen between 10 and 12 per cent, according to the recent testimony of Secretary of Labor Perkins, with clothing up 21 per cent and food up 16 per cent. She also said the wage level had remained almost stationary, while rents were slightly lower. The American Federation of Labor estimates that there are still about 10,000,000 unemployed in the United States.

STUPIDITY OF WAR

Everyone who thinks about it must realize the absurdity of placing two armies of men in the field to kill each other, when the men themselves have no personal grudge against those whom they are supposed to kill nor any definite idea of what it is all about.

This was strikingly illustrated some time ago in China, where two opposing generals, Marshal Ho and General Lu, both secretly deserted their armies and fled to Japan. Not knowing that their leaders had departed, the contending armies fought on for eight hours.

When it was discovered that the generals had gone, the two armies threw down their arms and mingled with each other in friendly fashion. This incident is vouched for by the treasurer of the Episcopal mission at Shanghai.

Opposing troops of civilized nations, especially, have fraternized in many wars during periods of truce. A large number of American soldiers married German girls after the world war. The common people have nothing to do with war, except to do the fighting, the suffering and the dying.

While America must not allow a misguided pacifism to weaken her capacity for defense, her voice always should be raised in protest against the stupidity of war.

A NOBLE BEQUEST

Another fine example of the growing tendency toward benevolence on the part of wealthy men is seen in the will of the late S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway and official in numerous other large enterprises.

Mr. Warfield left his residuary estate, estimated to be between five and ten million dollars, for the founding of a home for dependent aged women. It will be located at his Manor Glen farm, near Monckton, Md., and will be called "Anna Emory Warfield Home," in memory of his mother.

Beginning as a clerk, Mr. Warfield rose to high eminence in the industrial and banking world. He was one of the leaders in the amazing development which has taken place in the South during the last two decades. His high character and humanitarian impulses may be judged by the noble bequest he made for the care of unfortunate aged women.

The home which his beneficence will establish will stand as a monument to his useful life and as a memorial to the devoted mother who gave his birth.

ABOUT VAMPIRES

In current slang, as is well known, the term "vamp," a contraction of "vampire," is used to designate a seductive female.

In olden times, and even in recent years in parts of eastern Europe, the vampire was a more sinister and fearsome entity.

In the original meaning, a vampire was supposed to be the soul of a dead person which leaves the buried body at night to suck the blood of living persons, usually causing their death. Hence, it was believed that upon opening the grave of a vampire the body would be found still fresh and rosy from the blood thus absorbed.

Dead persons most likely to become vampires were supposed to be those who had committed suicide or had come to their death by violent means; also wizards, witches and those who had been cursed by their parents or by the church. A cat crossing a grave might transform the occupant into a vampire.

To stop the depredations of a supposed vampire, it was thought necessary to drive a stake through the corpse, sever the head, remove the heart, burn the body, or pour boiling water and vinegar on the grave.

Later, the term vampire was applied to certain species of blood-sucking bats of Central and South America, concerning which many popular superstitions have also arisen.

Finally, we have the alluring vampire, or "vamp," of the movie screen and Main street. But there isn't much superstition about her.

Cheaper cigarettes are promised in case the Vinson bill, reducing the federal tax 40 per cent, becomes a law, it being understood that leading manufacturers have agreed to pass all the tax saving on to the consumer. At present each package of 20 cigarettes pays six cents tax to the government, while additional state taxes are levied in many states. In Alabama, for example, the state tax is three cents on each package, making a total of nine cents tax on every 20 cigarettes sold.

America's first woman airplane pilot, Blanche S. Scott, who was also the first woman to drive an automobile across the United States, is still among the living, although she had at least one close call. In one of her early flights she crashed, breaking 23 bones. She now follows the less hazardous vocation of a writer at her home in Rochester, N. Y.

We may never see a purple cow, as Gelett Burgess hoped he would not, but visitors to the Smithsonian Institution may see eight honest-to-goodness blue sheep. These rare animals were brought from the high mountains of Szechwan province, in western China, where the species inhabits crags 10,000 feet or more in height.

BENEFITS OF SUNSHINE

With the advent of summer, prudent housewives bring their murky, yellowed household linens out for exposure once more to the bleaching, whitening influence of the sunshine.

Scientific study has proved that the direct rays of the sun's light exert a beneficial effect on fabrics that can be obtained in no other manner. Drying away from the influences of open air and sunlight lacks the value to be had from summertime, outdoor drying.

"Wind and sun are the final two important factors in the correct cleansing of clothes," says a home economics expert, who adds: "Correct sorting of articles and cleansing of the various lots at the right temperature for each in the family washing machine are the necessary first steps.

"Direct sunshine fades non-fast fabrics, but is beneficial except for that. Uncolored table linens, bedding and other white goods are fresher and sweeter through open-air drying. Colored fabrics get all the same benefits, the need being only to shelter them from sharp, direct rays of the sun."

A columnist tells of a friend who has found in Kansas the ideal location for a great university, described as "the finest place in the world for a natural stadium." He adds: "If I can raise the money to hire a coach, we'll be all set."

"THERE'S ALWAYS JULIET"
AT THE CURRAN THEATRE

Conrad Nagel and Violet Hemming, two of Broadway's most prominent stars, are coming to the Curran Theatre, San Francisco, for a two week's stay commencing Monday Evening, June 18th, in John van Druten's smart comedy success, "There's Always Juliet."

Henry Duffy, under whose management these noted stars are to appear brought Mr. Nagel and Miss Hemming direct from Boston where they have just concluded a tour of the major cities throughout the East in this same play. They will make a brief tour of the Pacific Coast, starting at the Curran Theatre.

"There's Always Juliet" ran for one solid year at the Empire Theatre, in New York, and for another year at the St. James Theatre in London and in both cities it was considered one of the finest plays produced in recent years.

Jane Cowl, that lovely star of the spoken stage, comes to the Curran Theatre in San Francisco in Kieth Winter's New York success, "The shining Hour," on Monday Evening, July 2nd, immediately following the two weeks' run of Conrad Nagel and Violet Hemming.

FOLLOWED INSTRUCTIONS

The superintendent had severely criticized the trainmaster for laxity in reporting accidents, impressing upon him the fact that it was very necessary to report by wire immediately anything that appeared to be an accident, no matter how trivial it might seem, without awaiting for details.

Only a few days later, the superintendent received the following wire: "Man fell off the platform in front of engine." To which the superintendent wired: "Advise details." The trainmaster replied: "No one hurt; engine was backing up."

CENSURED FOR SAVING TRAIN

When Howard Gibson, a railroad employee, saw a supply train speeding down a steep grade near Waynesboro, Virginia, on the same track on which a freight train was standing, he threw a switch and let the supply train slide in safety onto a side-track. He was then bawled out for having unauthorized possession of the switch key. Which somehow reminds us of the late John McGraw, who once fined a player for hitting a home run when he had been signalled to bunt.

CHAPTER I

As the one-train-a-day pursued its course through a sparsely settled hill country, Janet Mercer was conjecturing why parents should send their boys and girls to school in such a lonely region.

From her bag she had taken more than once the clipping of an advertisement, pinned to the letter which had so greatly aroused her interest and had resulted in her burning her bridges and coming to this unfamiliar region to teach English literature and rhetoric.

The advertisement had first caught her attention because of its odd wording:

"Lostland academy. Famous in its time in the Fingerlake region. It still adheres to classical education; and regards an acquaintance with Horace as a privilege to be sought, not evaded, in the interest of urbanity. A new faculty is being brought together; and the honor of aiding in its composition is open to early applicants. College graduates only need apply. A teacher of English literature and rhetoric is needed; also a teacher of mathematics and chemistry."

The letter, signed Gordon Haskell, was more circumstantial:

"My Dear Miss Mercer:

"Your letter of application for the post of teacher of English literature and rhetoric in Lostland academy pleased me greatly. You seem well qualified for the position, and I should judge that you were a young lady not easily disturbed or excited, and fully equipped mentally to earn the generous salary of three hundred a month for the eight teaching months, which is the standard salary for my teachers. I believe that if you desire talent you must be willing to pay for it; and the noble work of educating our future citizens should never be underpaid.

"To reach Lostland academy you must change cars at Otenga and take a branch line. We have but one train a day, which leaves Otenga at 10 a. m. and arrives here at 4. Unfortunately it has neither pullman nor dining car, so you would do well to bring a station lunch box. You will be met at Blade—perhaps there will be another member of the faculty traveling down at the same time."

Janet had looked her fellow-passengers over several times in the hope of identifying "another member of the faculty"; but, no one fitting in her preconception, she chose a man about twenty-seven years old, in whose countenance she thought she detected ability to solve mathematical problems.

He, too, had brought a station lunch box; and about noon he examined its contents; but he ate mechanically, and then settled to the examination of a letter. After a time he made a journey down the rocking aisle of the train to the water tank, where he had infinite difficulty in clawing out a paper cup, then in shaping it and conveying the nicked rim to his lips. With an air of relief and some water on his vest he came down the aisle.

The train was rocking and rattling over the curved track as if apprehensive that it would never reach its destination.

As the train turned a curve, the young man passed Janet's seat, and was nearly precipitated into it. Simultaneously he regained his balance and saw the letter outspread on her lap.

"I'm so sorry," he apologized in a delightful voice. "And will you think me very impertinent? May I inquire if you are on the way to Lostland academy?"

"Yes. I am the teacher of English literature and rhetoric."

"And I'm slated for mathematics and chemistry."

"Won't you—sit down?"

"Thanks." He smiled boyishly as if really grateful to her for the invitation. Beneath the smile she read a certain bewilderment, mingled, when his eyes were turned toward her, with frank and friendly admiration. He was thinking that she was very pretty. He liked her blue serge suit and her close little velvet hat from under which her eyes regarded him kindly.

"Rather strange landscape," he ventured. "But it's all strange—my sudden coming—the letter—the large salary—and every one on the same basis."

"Yes, it is apparently a standardized sum. I wonder how many teachers are on the faculty? Mr. Haskell's expenses must be very heavy—but then he probably has a great many students."

Arthur Fleming was regarding her with meditative, admiring eyes. "Somehow it all seems rather ideal—the lonely country—a number of people with a common purpose marooned among these hills. I don't like cities. I am looking forward to cross-country walks—skating. Do you skate?"

"Yes—I am very fond of outdoor sports."

"And I suppose you love your subjects; or you would scarcely be teaching them."

"English literature, especially. I feel as if I were a mistress of ceremonies, and should I wave a wand, a blind man with beautiful thoughts and visions would enter; or a melancholy poet with the heart of a child and a great fear about his salvation, or a stern and passionate young woman whose soul, I am sure, still haunts the purple heather in Yorkshire."

"Milton, Cowper, and Emily Bronte," he commented with a smile. "I am a great lover of Dickens. I want to go to London before all his haunts have vanished. I should like to see Dover as David Copperfield did. You remember he imagined his mother coming down the shining road of the sea. Mine died when I was three."

"My mother is dead, too; and my father married again."

"I am so glad—you are to be on the faculty."

His color rose a little and his clear boyish eyes were directed again to the flying hills.

"There was another strange thing," she ventured. "I did not find Lostland academy listed in any of the educational directories."

"I looked for it, too—then I thought it might possibly have a new official name; and be unregistered. I wish we were there. I want to have all my questions answered."

"What time is it?"

"Just three. One hour more."

Blade proved to be a flag station. No one but himself and Janet Mercer and a middle-aged woman in black alighted from the train. The three stood uncertainly on the rough unpainted platform; and then the woman in black approached them, a shade of anxiety in her kindly, sensible face.

"I am Mrs. Denver," she said, "the new matron at Lostland academy. I expected to be met, but I do not see anyone. Are you acquainted here?"

"No, we are strangers. This is Mr. Fleming, one of the new teachers; and I am Miss Mercer."

"I am glad you are going there, too!" Mrs. Denver exclaimed with unmistakable relief. "This seems such a lonely place."

Undeniably it did. The hills, vast and grayish-green in color as if from outcroppings of granite, rose with threatening abruptness immediately back of the little station. From the station roof a rotting sign hung bearing in faded crimson letters the word "Blade." Some one long ago had emphasized the name by drawing in with crimson paint the rough outline of a dagger held in a gaunt fist. For some unknown reason the eyes of the three people were drawn to this symbol.

"May I inquire if you are on the way to Lostland Academy?"

"What an odd location for an academy," Janet commented, beginning to feel rather homesick and lonely—and thankful that Mrs. Denver was there, with her obvious good balance and her kindly, concerned face. Fleming did not answer her comment, but Janet saw that he was puzzled, and that he shared the dismay of his companions.

The silence about them was intense—except for the moaning of the wind in the telegraph wires. The country had a wild, almost a savage aspect.

"I imagine Haskell relies as much on fresh air as on the urbanities of Horace to bring his pupils forward; and considering that he knew three of us were arriving on this one train a day, it seems strange he didn't send some kind of a conveyance for us."

"Here comes a farmer with a load of apples," Mrs. Denver said. "Let's ask him."

The creaking old wagon was still several hundred yards away; and they watched its slow progress with impatience. A wizened old man was hunched in the driver's seat, and the slack reins hung almost to the ground. Behind him was a mound of greenish apples, and his gray hair blew in the mountain wind. As he drew near, Arthur hailed him.

"Can you tell us how to get to Lostland academy, and how far it is from here?"

The slack reins were drawn up, but the inquiries were not answered immediately. The driver stared with a curious expression at them as if they were in some way marked and identified by their connection with this academy as destined for no ordinary experiences.

"I know the place—ought to—it's been there more'n a hundred years. He'll send for you, all right—maybe be easier to get there than to come away."

"Why do you say that?" Arthur demanded. "Is there anything wrong with the place?"

The countryman's manner became secretive, almost shy. "I dunno as there is—I never heard nothin'. 'Twas a big school in Doctor Braebridge's day. Haskell'll send for you, all right."

Here's to a Smart Summer Wardrobe

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TURN to the east or turn to the west or turn to the spot you love best where to tarry a while in the good old summertime. Unless your wardrobe be well stocked with timely and practical as well as chic and pretty apparel your vacation is apt to count nil in the way of uplifting joy and satisfaction. Nest ce pas?

Not that one necessarily must have an extravagant collection of lovely frocks and sporty dresses and stunning hats and intriguing wraps and flattering accessories, for a few carefully chosen outfits count for far more than a superabundance of helter-skelter ill-advised fashions.

Reducing the formula for smart vacation clothes to its simplest, firstly a tailored-to-perfection ensemble for general daytime wear; secondly, a casual frock with swanky details for active sports wear; and thirdly, a sheer and lovely formal of alluringly feminine charm ought to go a far way toward helping start one's summer vacation style program in the right direction. The trio of stunning fashions shown here have been selected with this thought in mind.

Beginning with the tailored ensemble centered in the group, we feel we can recommend it as having all the necessary attributes to render it eligible for election as a fashion-supreme for general daytime wear. With all its summery daintiness when it comes to actual hard wear and tear it is a sturdy little affair designed to give real service. One of several reasons why you can depend upon it is that it is made of a soft yet firm Irish linen which is everlasting when it comes to color, is easily washable and best of all it is uncrushable which counts a lot when one is on the go from morning to night. The dress is nat-

SCOTCH PLAID NOW SEEN AT BEACHES

Now that the influence of practically every other nation has been seen in beach wear, along comes the Scotch trend, which presents as the last word in resort fashions a brief Scotch plaid skirt to wear over your swim suit.

And if you're so minded you may have a plaid sun hat or beret to match. Vivid plaid belts and shoulder straps also are blossoming out on some of the newest bathing suits, otherwise in solid colors.

Another beach costume goes definitely Turkish with a so-called skirt reaching to the middle of the calf, suggesting the sultan's trousers. Bloused fullness in front is caught at the hemline, and there are slits bound in vivid cotton braid, for the legs. The garment is really trousers, but looks like a skirt, or vice versa.

Sandals for Summer Wear Will Be a Riot of Color

Sandals, and more sandals for summer feet! From the cool meshed affairs to the perforated kidskin straps you can't ignore them. Bright colors are worn for street, as well as evening and beach and sports sandals are a blazing riot of color. All white footwear is the smartest footnote. Street models, afternoon, and evening, whatever you slip on your feet, the all white wins.

Cotton Tweed

A cotton tweed coat is something to keep in mind for summer wardrobes. The new ones, which look surprisingly like woollens, have coarse yarns in white, giving a nubby effect against colored grounds.

Fine Feathers

Feathers are an outstanding trim for evening gowns. Ostrich is the favorite and is seen in many versions, forming capes or shoulder accents.

SAILOR FASHION

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Sailor themes is news of high importance in connection with fashions for youngsters and juniors. Incidentally we might mention that it is also ultra chic for grown-up's costumes to take on nautical details, especially wide sailor collars in versatile interpretations. But to the subject before us—this cunning child in her modish little frock of white Irish linen which looks so smartly nautical with its sailor collar and sleeve bands of blue and its cord-laced fastening. Here we see the descendant of the sailor dresses which were the pride of the well dressed child in years gone by.

Coolie Coats

Coolie coats in pastel flannel are very smart, for street wear with dark dresses. The finger-tip length is favored and the sleeves are long and full.

AN AFFAIR OF HONOR

By THAYER WALDO

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

WITH Margaret on his arm, Ward strode proudly into the purple hat. It was thickly peopled, for he had purposefully chosen the busiest luncheon hour.

Half the men in Hollywood had been trying for a date with the little aristocrat from Kentucky ever since her arrival, and his success was worth a flourish.

Ward paused just inside, ostensibly seeking a table.

The golden-haired beauty beside him clung close with gratifying familiarity. Suddenly he saw a man emerge from a nearby booth and come toward them. It was Al Alberts of the scenario staff at Zenith.

Ward started a cordial greeting but checked it at sight of the other's unsmiling face.

Alberts confronted him and said evenly:

"See here, Ward; you're trespassing. Miss Blair promised me a luncheon appointment today."

Ward laughed shortly.

"Don't be absurd, old fellow," he rejoined; "you're just trying to attract attention."

"No; I'm entirely serious. I must ask you to withdraw."

From the corner of his eye Ward could see a number of persons watching interestedly. Among them he recognized the film editor of a leading afternoon paper. A wild impulse was born. He glanced swiftly at the girl; her cheeks were coloring and a haughty little scowl crinkled her forehead.

That decided him. Snatching a napkin from the nearest table, he wheeled and slapped it smartly across the Alberts face. "Take that, you insolent whelp!" he shouted with unnecessary volume. "This affront to mademoiselle can only be treated as an affair of honor."

Eyes blazing, the scoundrel cried: "Very well, sir; I am at your service." Silently Ward applauded the speech, it fit the scene he had attempted to create with nicety. He made a brief stiff bow and said:

"Excellent. I invite you to come with me at once and make the arrangements. This must be kept private to avoid interference."

"Good; I accept."

Ward faced Margaret Blair.

She was large-eyed now, and he thought he could detect excited approval in her expression.

"Will you," he asked, "have the goodness to forgive me if I leave you with a friend here and go? My hot blood can't tolerate such insulting conduct."

"Oh, suahly!" Her tone implied full understanding. "You'd have to do that now, of course."

Approaching the newspaperman, Ward said:

"Melvin, I'd be deeply obliged if you'd see that Miss Blair has lunch and gets back to the studio."

The editor rose, beaming. "Okay—be very happy."

Ward about-faced and with Alberts matching step, stalked from the place, happily conscious that all eyes followed.

Fifty paces the two men marched in silence; then:

"Have you ever handled a sword?" Ward demanded bluntly. The other shook his head.

"Never even held one."

"Neither have I. We'll have to figure some way around it. That was too good an act back there not to carry on."

"I'll say so! How did you happen to think of striking me with the napkin? That was real genius."

"Oh, because Maggie Blair was there, I guess. Old southern gesture, and all that. But the best thing was the way you approached me. What suggested that?"

"Well, she really did promise to have lunch with me; and then, I saw Melvin and thought how he'd like a nice spicy story."

"I got it. Same reason I challenged you. Now I've been considering, and here's what I think might work out best."

Al Alberts gave scrupulous attention. When the other concluded, he stated with emphasis:

"Great! That's the one plan that can save our faces and still be straight. Let's get 'em right now, and then we can go to my apartment for the art work."

"Right." Ward glanced back, made certain they weren't followed, and hailed a cab. Both men got in. Ward told the driver:

"Great Western Costume company."

Five minutes' ride through the scant midday traffic reached the place. Entering, they went at once to a long desk just inside; over it was painted a sign: PROPERTIES RENTAL DEPT.

"We want," Ward said to the man in charge, "two duelling swords. One day's rental; you can pick 'em up tomorrow at Zenith."

With professional disinterest the clerk made out a slip, got Ward's signature, and disappeared into a rear room.

Shortly he returned, bringing a paper-wrapped parcel from which protruded two gleaming hilts. Alberts tucked it under his arm and they left.

An hour later, seated before a window that overlooked the wooded flanks of Laurel canyon, Ward was giving himself careful scrutiny in a hand mirror.

The countenance it showed had undergone a gaudy transformation. Splashes of mercurochrome were spaced by court plaster patches; the effect was something between a major surgical and a severe case of scarlet fever.

"Thanks; practically perfect, seems to me," he told the other at last, putting the glass down. "And you—well, that mug's enough to strike awe in the hearts of strong men, if I do say it myself."

Alberts chuckled, stood up, and clicked his heels together.

"Honored opponent," he said, bending forward at the waist; "may I tender my respects at the close of this epic struggle which has ended in a draw? Let us hope our sons copy our virtues bold."

"Seconded. What this world needs is more virility and less shoddy humbug. . . . Say, what about the swords; think they ought to be unwrapped and done up in different paper?"

Alberts gestured carelessly. "No; that guy'll never notice details. Come on—let's have dinner sent up. I'm starved and we don't dare go out. But tomorrow we'll reap the rewards of valor. And remember—it's to be fair competition for Margaret Blair, and may the best liar win!"

. . . . and so, after ten minutes of terrific fighting with no advantages on either side, I finally began to force him back step by step. Ward paused; through the knot of auditors clustered about he glimpsed, across the lot, a similar group surrounding Alberts.

"I only hope," he stated stiffly, "that that gentleman over there is rendering me my just due, as I am his to him. . . . Let's see; where was I?"

The spectators were drawing back to make way for some one.

In an instant the eagerly concerned face of Margaret Blair appeared.

"Oh, my dear! she cried at sight of Ward. 'Youah so heroic lookin'! What happened?'"

He smiled upon her with expansive delight.

"Well, I was just explaining. We had a titanic battle, but at last I made one lightning lunge and—"

Again slight commotion as another newcomer shoved through the press from behind and tapped Ward's shoulder.

He turned sharply, frowning, and recognized the fellow from the costumers.

"Those swords," the fellow said; "where are they? I gotta have 'em right away."

Ward waved him impatiently aside. "Yes, yes; not just now. Can't you see I'm busy? . . . Well, he tried to parry the thrust, but—"

"Hey, I tell you I can't wait. It's important."

Drawing himself up, Ward swung full upon the man with a fearsome glower.

"I said later! Certainly you don't need them badly enough to warrant—"

"Yeah—I do, though." The property man's tone was doggedly persistent. "I just got a call from Paramount for two rubber swords, and those are the only ones we have."

Religious Liberty in Old Maryland Colony

It is not surprising that the colonists who founded Maryland sought religious liberty for themselves, but it was a novel proceeding that, in an age when Christendom was torn by fratricidal strife because of differences in creed, they should promise to give the same privilege of freedom of conscience to all others that came to live with them.

While as yet there was no spot in Europe or America where men's religious convictions were too sacred to be invaded by tests of state or assailed by the forces of bigotry, Lord Baltimore's first order to his colonists was that there should be no difference on account of religion.

The records show that at first both Catholics and Protestant sects used a community church; that a proclamation was issued in 1638 for the suppression of "disputes tending to the opening of a faction in religion." And an act of the assembly declared that "no person professing to believe in Jesus Christ shall be troubled, molested, or discountenanced, for, or in respect of, his or her religion."

Thus Protestant and Catholic dwelt together in harmony, neither attempting to interfere with the rights of worship of the other, and "religious liberty obtained a home, its only home in the wide world, at the humble village which bore the name of St. Marys."—Bulletin National Geographic Society.

Storm Prevents Battle

At one time during the World War Britain's grand fleet and the German high sea fleet were only 42 miles from each other, each arrayed for battle—a battle between two mighty fleets which never occurred because the German commander in chief, relying upon vital wireless information from a certain airship, scurried back to shelter, the airship in question having been compelled to turn aside from her course to avoid a thunderstorm and unable to secure the information wanted.

"And what is the rent of this room, including the use of the piano?" inquired the long-haired one.

"Well," suggested the landlady, "perhaps you'd be so good as to play me something first."

COUNTY HEALTH NEWS

Note: This is a weekly report from the San Mateo County Department of Public Health and Welfare, giving facts of importance for health protection and a list of all contagious diseases reported to the County Health Officer in the previous week, as required by law.

Eight weeks ago in this column, we relayed a warning from the State Department of Public Health, that a wave of poliomyelitis, (infantile paralysis) was to be expected in California this summer.

The expected epidemic has come more than one month ahead of schedule, and is showing a high percentage of deaths and severe paralyses. There have been more cases since the first of June than in the entire five months preceding. Los Angeles County has been the focus of the largest number of cases, but since June 1st the Bay region has been invaded by the same severe type of infection. In San Mateo County, we have two cases reported this week in addition to the two which appear in the morbidity figures accompanying this article.

Questions Answered

We are very busy answering questions, most of which are repetitions. Following are a number of answers to some of the more common questions:

1. We advise giving up all dancing parties, for the present because this involves several factors that spread the disease, namely intimate personal contact, late hours, and fatigue.
2. Swimming in small unchlorinated pools, especially if used by many people within a short time, is very dangerous, as probably the largest doses of infectious material are swallowed or inhaled while swimming.
3. There is no use trying to run away from poliomyelitis. It is better to stay at home and live a hygienic, open-air life, avoid crowds and unnecessary intimate personal contacts, and go to a hospital immediately in case of suspicious illness.
4. Early diagnosis is a most important factor and depends largely on a slight operation known as a lumbar puncture, for which it is always best to be in a hospital if possible.
5. Poliomyelitis is not truly a children's disease. It is probably most often spread by adult carriers. In the present epidemic a large percentage of adults and adolescents are being affected.
6. Initial symptoms are often slight such as change in disposition, "head cold," or digestive symptoms.
7. The emergency is present now. We should act now to prevent a very serious condition in the near future.
8. If you believe in a public health program, and have faith in your health department, you can help in the emergency by asking the Supervisors to give us the personnel and emergency appropriation to fight the epidemic in the most approved way.

TWO WEEK SCHOOL OPENS

Bright faces! Merry laughter! Joyous greetings! Prancing feet! In a word "life at its best," gathered in front of Grace Church of the Nazarene, Vista Grande and Santa Barbara, Monday morning. The hour had arrived for the annual daily vacation Bible School. The great bell echoed the glad news to the far corners of the community.

At the first note of music sixty six happy boys and girls marched into the Junior department quarters. Not a dull moment from 9:30 to 12 is allowed by Mrs. Myrtle Young, and her capable co-laborers. Memory work, object lessons, handwork, drills, singing is part of the work covered by the various age groups.

Training the child is only a part of the many advantages of the daily vacation and bible school. It helps parent to solve in a small measure the vacation problem.

Tuesday, the reporter from Grace Church of the Nazarene indicated, attendance had gone up to the eighty-eight mark, and provision has been made for even a hundred scholars by the last of the week.

The first bell rings at 9 and the last at 9:30. Whether children attend Grace Church of the Nazarene Sunday School or not they are cordially invited to attend the daily vacation bible school. There art no change.

This certificate, which brings national recognition to Miss Clement, is given by Better Homes & Gardens only to distinguished recipes which pass its testing kitchen's tests for dependability, excellence of taste, and family usefulness.

In addition to the signed certificate, Miss Clement also received six copies of her endorsed recipe, each bearing the Better Homes & Gardens stamp of recipe endorsement, which she can give to her friends.

In awarding these certificates, it is the magazine's aim to provide proper recognition for the creative work done by women in their own kitchens, and also to raise the standard of accuracy and dependability of recipes as a whole.

Miss Clement's endorsed recipe follows:

Delicious Cake

Three-quarter cupful of shortening, two cupfuls sugar, three eggs, three-quarter cupful milk, two and a half cupfuls cake flour, two and a half teaspoons baking powder, one-quarter teaspoon salt, one teaspoon vanilla.

Cream the shortening and sugar until very fluffy. Add the eggs, with the flour, which has been sifted with the baking powder and salt. Add the vanilla and beat until smooth. Place in two greased and floured layer cake pans. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees). Cool and ice as desired. Chocolate fudge icing is particularly good on the cake.
